God's Mission is My Mission

God's heartbeat is for the nations and because it's His heartbeat, it should be mine as well

In February, a gentleman from our church along with myself traveled with Mission Link International for a fourteen day short-term mission trip to Uganda (pictured below is Richard Caldwell & Pastor Aaron). Altogether, the ten member team was able to conduct three large crusades in villages with special focuses in pastoral training, pastor's wives encouragement, and children's ministry. Other days were spent ministering to widows, holding eye-glass clinics, preaching in a local prison, outreach to street kids, as well as one-on-one personal evangelism in a local hospital. By far, one of the greatest blessings was being able to spend time with the Uganda Mission Link Staff. Their love for Christ and commitment to His work are incredibly profound.

The experience of the trip reminded me afresh and anew of two great truths. First, the LORD reminded me of the great impact that is made when God's people give to the work of world missions. Missions is primarily the responsibility of the local church — and the church is not a building but rather it is the people. While being in Africa, I had the opportunity to see many different types of "church buildings." In some places the buildings were constructed with concrete walls, metal roofs, and had fabric cushioned benches, others were made out of brick walls, thatched roofs and had plastic chairs, some were made out of sticks and mud and people sat on the ground, and in some cases a new church plant would meet under a large shade tree. However, every local Body of Christ with whom we gathered was not a church because of their building, but because they were a group of redeemed people. The bond that we have in Christ is the common denominator which draws us together. Context and culture are different all around the world, but our identity as the church of Jesus Christ remains the same. If you have been born again, and are now in Christ and a part of His family, the task of world missions is OUR responsibility. Christ's followers have been commissioned to "Go . . . and make disciples of all nations" (Matt. 28:19).

In addition to being reminded of the great impact that is made when God's people give to the work of world missions, I was also reminded that each follower of Christ has been commissioned to be personally involved in advancing God's kingdom in the present. God has a plan and purpose for each individual life. He's the Great Architect of His church. He is the One who has drawn the blueprint — and as living stones we each are a part of and have a part to play in the building. Your life matters. In His grace, the gifts He has given you, the location where He has placed you, the relationships He has led you to, and the resources He has entrusted to you — are so that, you might use your life to impact others for His praise and glory! While in Africa, Dr. Rick gave us the opportunity and assignment to spend a day with an African. I spent the day with Pastor James Mafabi (Pictured Above Right is Pastor Aaron & Pastor James Mafabi of Mission Link Christian Church). Both of us have pastored nearly the same length of time, but in completely different contexts. We sat down over a cup of coffee for nearly three hours, and then spent the rest of the afternoon visiting his home and meeting his family. Our time together was a great encouragement! Even though ministry context looks different, basic human need is the same. Together we shared delights and challenges of pastoral ministry and spent time praying for one another. In the weeks being back in the States, Pastor James and I have corresponded through email and have made the commitment to pray for one another before our services on Sunday. In sharing my experience with our church in Catawba, I recounted how impactful it would be if each person had the opportunity to experience a short-term mission trip to another country at least once! Pictures and videos, although helpful, fall short in communicating the power of a personal connection. Our Christianity in America has been steeped by the context of our society, and going to a different part of the world helps you understand what things in our own culture have been wrongly inflated. All that God has entrusted to you is an evidence of His Grace, would you pray and ask the LORD how He would have you GIVE as well as in what way you can be PERSONALLY INVOLVED in the great endeavor of world missions.

News Brief

OUR GENERAL FUND HAS GAIN MOMENTUM, BUT WE REALLY NEED A SERIOUS INJECTION: Mission Link International accomplishes many projects in Africa as well as acting being a channel for funds from the USA to East Africa. This month alone we forwarded to Kenya over $24,000 to help with the hunger crisis due to drought. Also, we have a General Fund that covers many administration and mission needs. Your gift to the general fund is a vital source and blessing. Thank you so much!

WIDOW'S PROJECTS: (1) The chicken project in Mafubira continues to strengthen as our new batch of 317 chickens (33 have died leaving 317) are gaining weight. Any gift toward this project (feed/shots) is appreciated. (2) Our Itukulu project is ready to build on our recently purchased land. Building a small facility for the milling machine (and grain storage) is MLI's first priority. (3) Esther's House is being constructed & continues to move forward (donors please continue to fund). OTHER MLI PROJECTS: (4) Uway Church's first phase is funded! When Candy and I eat out, we will spend on average $30 which could easily relieve some of a widow's financial burden. There are so so many that long for assistance. Your sacrificial gift to a distressed widow will be a tremendous blessing. The relationship with your adopted widow will be very rewarding.
